The Gulf Restoration Network on wetlands

The [Gulf Restoration Network] works to protect wetlands from reckless development, destructive logging practices, and harmful U.S. Army Corps of Engineers projects and policies.

More specifically

- You apply for a permit build on the wetlands in the United States.
- The Army Corps of Engineers can approve permits that meet certain criteria.
- I have no idea how the Army got this job.
- The Army, understandably, doesn't scrutinize permits as much as the Gulf Restoration Network would like.
